

We All Love Babbling!

Calling for articles

Dear teachers,

As the Easter holiday is round the corner, will you have more spare time in hand? Do you have some thoughts or experiences to share? Is there somebody you want to appreciate? Please find time to write them down and send them to us.

I am now preparing the third edition of the Babbling series to be named as We All Love Babbling. The first publication of the series was in summer 2014. Then it was only a collection of my blog entries which were my reflections about life, the people I met and things happening around me etc.

The second issue, Let's Babble, has more than me as the writer. I invited teachers to contribute. They did. Their articles cover a wide spectrum of interesting topics.

This time, I am extending my invitation to not just teachers but anybody who loves to write and share in English. In fact, I have collected several articles from my former students and friends! You can do the same. Invite your colleagues, friends or even students.

The Babbling series are given away free-of-charge to schools for teachers and students to read in leisure or to use as materials for speaking and writing practice. These booklets have been quite well received. Around 3000 copies have already been given out.

There are always moments in our everyday life when we see something, hear something and feel some strong sentiments! I choose to write them down and I am glad I have. Every time when I read Babbling or Let's Babble, I feel happy that I have put those fleeting thoughts into writing because otherwise, they would have gone.

Your articles do not have to be anything academic but must transmit positive messages as we aim to make the world more cheerful through our small efforts. The target audience ranges from young adults like our students to our colleagues. Each article is to be around 250 words. Please complement it with a relevant photo you have taken or royalty-free image. Please also include a few lines to introduce yourselves to our readers.

Once your articles are included in We All Love Babbling, you will be given a token honourarium and one copy of the book for every article submitted. You are most welcome to send in multiple entries. Of course, we do reserve our editorial rights.

Simply download and attach the submission form together with your article (s) and email to us at hkwto_2006@yahoo.com.hk.

I am eagerly looking forward to reading your entries.
